How to deal with bullying

• Take your child’s concerns seriously and do not blame your child or ignore the problem. It is important to discuss the issues with your child openly and honestly.

• Reassure your child that the situation is not hopeless and help is available.

• Ask your child questions related to bullying including how long it has been going on and whether the school teacher is aware of the problem.

• Teach your child to be assertive but not to over-react or lash out at the bully.

Cyber bullying: Always ensure parental supervision with internet safety. Encourage your child to avoid replying to nasty messages, not to post photos or videos they are not happy for others to watch and to avoid adult websites.

• Contact the head teacher of your child’s school to raise concerns and discuss how best to resolve the problem.

• You can also contact Family Lives helpline (0808 800 2222) for advice.

What to do if your child is a bully

• Explain it is not fun, it can cause sadness and even lead the victim to attempt self-harm.

• Help and support your child to resolve their own social and emotional problems.

School support

• Bullying is unacceptable and every school should have an anti-bullying policy in place.

• Some of the methods of dealing with bullying include: no-blame, counselling, circle time and peer support programme.

Books and Websites

• Bullyproof Your Child For Life: Protect Your Child from Teasing, Taunting, and Bullying for Good, by Joel Haber, Penguin Group Publishers.

• Bullies, Bigmouths and so-called Friends (for children), by Jenny Alexander, Hodder Children’s Books.

• www.beatbullying.org:
  The charity provides anti-bullying information, resources, advice and support for young people, parents and professionals.

• www.bullying.co.uk  •  www.familylives.org.uk

References

Acknowledgements

• Liz Bonar, Daubeney Middle School, Kempston.
• Paul Clair, SEED, Robert Bruce Middle School, Kempston.

Copyright in text © Health Insights 4U Ltd and Dr C Yemula.

Supported by an unrestricted educational grant from Flynn Pharma Ltd.

MNL/PAB/13/0434 Date of preparation October 2013.
What is bullying?
Bullying is a behaviour by an individual or group, usually repeated over time, that intentionally hurts another individual or group, either physically or emotionally.¹

How common is bullying?
Bullying is a common problem experienced by many children and young people. According to a National Bullying Survey (2006) by the charity 'Bullying UK', 69% of children reported being bullied, 20% reported bullying others and 85% had witnessed bullying.

ADHD and bullying
Children with ADHD are 3 times more likely to be active bullies and 10 times more likely to be victims of bullying, according to a Swedish Study (2008).² An ADHD study showed that compared with boys, girls are more often the victims of bullying and are less likely to be the bully.

Types of bullying
Bullying is a form of aggression that can be direct or indirect, involving both boys and girls.

- Physical bullying: pushing, kicking, pinching, hitting, biting, shoving, stealing belongings, threatening with weapons (more common in boys).
- Verbal bullying: name calling, mocking, threatening, gossiping, picking on the victim etc.
- Social bullying: occurs indirectly by ignoring, spreading rumours, social rejection, excluding from peer group (more common in girls).
- Cyber bullying: it is estimated that 25% of young people (1 in 4) are cyber bullied at some stage. It can occur continually both inside and outside school and may involve internet and mobile phone use in order to threaten, tease or abuse the victim. This may include sending offensive emails, text messages, circulating indecent images and misusing social networks such as Facebook.

Why are children bullied?
The reasons for bullying may lie deep within the mind of the bully, who themselves tend to have a number of social and emotional issues. A bully may seek out a person who seems vulnerable, non-aggressive, physically or socially weaker or lower in confidence or self-esteem.

A bully will then find an area on which to focus the bullying such as:

- The child’s weight, appearance, colour of the skin/hair, culture or religion.
- The child’s disability, how they walk or talk or even for having an unusual name.

Bullying occurs mostly at school, during playtime or lunchtime when there is minimal supervision.

Impact of bullying
Effects of bullying
Bullying can have serious and harmful effects. Having been bullied, some children can become bullies themselves (both a bully and a victim in a bullying cycle).

Bullies tend to drop out of school, have social difficulties and are more likely to engage in smoking, alcohol or drugs. It is reported that bullies are 4 times more likely to get involved in criminal behaviour as young adults.

The victim often has low self-esteem and feels miserable, anxious or sad. He or she may also feel insecure, fearful, helpless or guilty. They may avoid school, lack concentration, perform poorly in school work and become lonely. Persistent bullying can also lead to self-harm and depression.

How to identify bullying
Children who are being bullied may show a number of symptoms such as:

- Refusing to go to school, poor concentration, poor school grades.
- Headaches, tummy aches, bed wetting, sleep difficulties, anxiety and even self-harm.