Now in its twelfth year, ADHD Foundation is a leading mental health charity and the largest 'user-led' ADHD agency in Europe, supporting more than 3,000 families every year with children and young people living with ADHD, and delivering training to over 4,000 professionals across the UK, including teachers, nurses and doctors. The work that the Foundation does can make the difference, allowing young people to self-manage the effect of their ADHD and develop resilience and coping strategies allowing them to live a full and active life.

The Umbrella Project aims to flip the disabling perception of neurodiverse individuals on its head, and instead, celebrate cognitive differences - part of an initiative to raise awareness of Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), autism and neurodiversity. The Umbrella Project returned to Liverpool's Church Alley for the third consecutive year in summer 2019, as well as BBC North at MediaCityUK, Salford Quays - where it debuted in 2018 - and new for this year, Heathrow's Terminal 5, marking the first time the artwork has been available to view in London or at an airport.
