About us

The ADHD Foundation Neurodiversity Charity is the national ADHD charity for the UK, and the largest user-led ADHD charity in Europe. Working in partnership with individuals, families, doctors, teachers, government and other agencies, the ADHD Foundation actively promotes a strength-based approach to living successfully with ADHD.

Our team of skilled, experienced and dedicated staff, sessional workers and volunteers, understand first-hand the issues around ADHD, sharing their experience and providing skill support and encouragement.

Many people believe that it can be difficult to obtain ADHD assessments. Here at the ADHD Foundation, we strive to deliver an accessible, efficient and high-quality service, whether you live in Liverpool or further afield.

At the ADHD Foundation Neurodiversity Charity, we offer a full ADHD screening for people aged 18 to 60. Our trained staff utilise assessment scales, interviews and the use of the QbTest to provide clinicians with accurate and detailed information to aid in a diagnosis.

What services do we provide?

Full ADHD Assessment/Screen:

At the ADHD Foundation Neurodiversity Charity, we offer a full ADHD screen for 6 to 17 year olds. This is not a diagnosis - it is a comprehensive screen used to support a diagnosis comprising of the QbTest, ADHD rating scales, Clinical interview, and full history. This can be very helpful in determining if ADHD is present. The pre-screen is not a diagnosis it is a comprehensive screen designed to aid in the diagnosis process. It creates a body of evidence that the diagnosing clinician can then use.

You can then direct what we do with this information. For instance, if the test is supportive and your child has a consultant, we can send the results to the consultant requesting that they continue on the ADHD pathway. If they are not on any ADHD pathway we can write to their G.P requesting that based on the evidence from the assessment, that they should be referred onto the NHS child ADHD pathway.

Finally, we can discuss Private Psychiatrists. Most Private Psychiatrists require a G.P. referral and prices vary. Please be advised that this process can be costly if you wish to access medication. We also offer a QbTest only option - read on for more information.

Can my child be referred to the NHS after a private diagnosis?

In some cases, yes. However, a shared care agreement must be made with your GP. If requested, we will help in this matter and write to your GP requesting the transition but it is not always possible and can take time. The best thing to do is have a discussion with your GP first about your private assessments.

What is the QbTest?

The QbTest is an objective testing system that simultaneously measures attention, impulsivity and motor activity, key indicators in helping formulate a diagnosis of ADHD. The results obtained by the test may be used to help form a better understanding of any cognitive and behavioural difficulties. The QbTest helps cut through ambiguous information and strip away human error.

The QbTest is not a diagnosis, it is a sophisticated screening tool which is used to support a diagnosis. Only a doctor can diagnose. The QbTest is recognised by health professionals and is used to give the consultants greater confidence when diagnosing as it is very accurate.

There are two types of tests available:

15 minute test

This is designed for 6-12 year olds. During the test 2 symbols are shown on the screen 1 at a time. They will be presented either with a circle, or a circle with a cross in its centre. The task is to only click when the circle appears and not when the circle with a cross appears. They will be required to click 50% of the time. The task is designed to be randomised and quick.

20 minute test

This is designed for 12-60 year olds. During the task, they will be presented with 4 symbols 1 at a time. These are; a red square, a red circle, a blue square, and a blue circle. The task is to only click when the same shape and colour are repeated. They will be required to click 25% of the time. The task is designed to be randomised and quick.

FAQs

Does the camera film the child?

No, the camera can only see the movement of the infrared marker. It captures how much the marker moves during the test.

How long does it take?

Depending on age it can take 15 or 20 minutes.

What does my child have to do?

During the test symbols are shown on the screen. Their task is to click when certain symbols appear.

Do language skills or dyslexia affect the test?

No, neither of these will impact on the test.

Can computer gaming affect results?

No, there is no link between video game experiences and test results.

Will they be able to practise?

Yes. Before the test the clinical advisor will show your child an instructional video. They will then have an opportunity to complete 1 minute practice tests and ask any questions. The clinical advisor will only start the test once they are confident that your child understands the instructions and is able to complete the task.

What if they cannot do the test?

In rare cases, some people cannot do the test or the test is not possible. If this happens, do not worry! This can be incredibly useful to help us understand what is impacting a person's cognitive abilities. In most cases, if a test is not possible, this is indicative of other conditions such as Autism, Anxiety, or Irlen Syndrome.

QbTest Only

What if I just want the QbTest, or if my Doctor has completed the other aspects of the screen and has only requested the QbTest?

It is quite common for clinicians, both NHS or private, to refer their patients to our service to access just the QbTest, or for families to only want to access this part. If you only want to access the QbTest due to any of the above reasons please mark this option on the referral form.

Accessing the QbTest alone is much faster than the full assessments we offer and we are able to send the results to your child's clinician within days of the appointment.

How much does it cost?

Total price: £270

This must be paid before any appointments can be booked. Your child will only have the QbTest, no rating scales or clinical interview will be completed.

How do I access this?

Complete and return the referral form and tick the QbTest only option.

Once the referral form has been accepted we will send the Invoice. Please note that appointments cannot be booked until the payment is made.

Once payment is received we can book your child's QbTest appointment as soon as possible.

You will then receive your child's results 3 weeks after the appointment and the results will be sent to any other agency, health provider, or school of your choice. If you have been referred by a clinician, we will send the results to the referring clinician.

The QbTest is a cognitive test. At the appointment the Psychologist will assess if anything may impact the validity of the results, such as being hungover. If the test was not possible and the school or family wish to re-book it would be subject to the £100 re-booking fee.
